Harvey Watterson Killed.

Harvey Watterson, son of Henry Watterson editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, was instantly killed by a fall from a window of his law office on the nineteenth floor of the Trust Company of America building late Wednesday afternoon in New York city. It was from one of the side windows overlooking the United States Trust Company building that he fell and he landed on the roof of that building, nine stories below. Death, according to Coroner's Physician Lebane, must have been instantaneous. After a careful examination Dr. Lebane pronounced the fatality a case of accidental death.

The theory accepted by Dr. Lebane and held by Mr. Watterson's law partners, Thomas E. Wing and Philip W. Russell, and others in a position to have first-hand information, is that Mr. Watterson's hand slipped as he was endeavoring to close a window in his private office and that he fell forward as a result with such force that he was unable to catch the sides of the window or the sill. The sill is very low, reaching only to one's knees, and could afford little protection in such a circumstance.

Osteopathic Association.

Osteopathic physicians from Georgetown, Carlisle, Cynthiana and Frankfort were in Paris Tuesday attending the meeting of the Central Kentucky Osteopathic Association held in the offices of Drs. Petree and Longan. Those present considered this the best meeting the Association has held.

Drought Finally Broken.

A general rain that in some portions reached the proportions of a storm broke the long drought and farmers throughout Kentucky are jubilant. All sections of the State received a goodly share of the precipitation and apparently no one was overlooked. The rain began here about midnight Monday and continued at intervals throughout the night, Tuesday and Tuesday night when a sudden fall in the temperature caused the rain to cease.
